Problem Statement

My life would be easier if someone would invent an app or website that connects any Learning Management Systems (LMS) to my calendar, creating events into my calendar to tell me when assignments are due or when I have SI (Supplemental Instruction) sessions. Instead of me going into my calendar and doing it myself every week.

More details about my problem statement. This is a big problem for me and a lot of other people I talk to. It's hard to keep updating your calendar almost every day when your professors put up assignments and sometimes some assignments get lost and I forget to add them. That's why I think it would be very beneficial if it's possible to connect my Blackboard to my calendar through an app or website. That would make it very stress free because every time one of my professors post an assignment or any special dates it would be moved straight into my calendar. It also would also be easier on the student because they will get notification about what they have to do all the time without having to go through Blackboard and then uploading all those things into their calendar manually.
